Fall 2020

Professor Gabriel McGuire

Tuesday - Thursday
12:30 - 13:45

This course emphasizes developing students' ability to read literature, to understand the genres and techniques of literary writing, to use this understanding to engage in critical discussions of the text, and to use evidence from the text in support of their interpretations. Students will be introduced to various approaches to the interpretation of literature, and will be required to write short essays that apply these approaches to selected readings.
